She's the little spoon: Snuggle up for $60

Never underestimate the power of the human touch.

At least, that's the business model that Penfield, N.Y. woman Jackie Samuel is banking on. About a month ago, she launched a website that offers a solid hour of cuddle time in exchange for a cool $60.

"I really just wanted to cuddle," the upstate New York resident told Metro.

On her site, The Snuggery, Samuel showcases herself as an advocate for the healing power of touch. With photos that show her in cozy, curled up poses dressed in pajamas, Samuel states that Americans are deprived of enough non-sexual touch and that's why she is here to help.

Samuel said she has looked into getting certified for her snuggle sessions, but found that the only certification available was for people looking to host group snuggling parties. Samuel just wanted to do individual cuddling. When she placed an ad for her snuggle services in the back of her local newspaper, business started to flow in.

"There are different kinds of cuddling positions, but I typically always start out spooning. And I am pretty small, so usually I'm the little spoon," Samuel said. METRO/CG

Shark for sale?

A man has been trying to sell a small live shark on the subway, reported Gothamist yesterday.

A source told the site that the entrepreneur had caught the fish at Coney Island after it tried to bite him and was now selling it for $100. Last seen on the J train, the man was carrying his little shark in a disposable cooler.

PETA officials told Gothamist that the man may be "bitten" again after the Department of Environmental Conservation finds out about his fishy business ventures. METRO/DB

Billboard draws fury from Israelis

WESTCHESTER. The Anti-Defamation League criticized a billboard campaign in Metro-North train stations yesterday, saying the posters incorrectly accuse Israel of taking land from the Palestinians.

"The Israeli-Palestinian conflict is extremely complex and cannot be summarized in a series of four maps," said the group's New York director Ron Meier.

The maps show an expansion of Israeli land from 1946 to 2010. They are sponsored by the Committee for Peace in Israel. METRO/DB

Rescue saves window crew

MIDTOWN. Two stranded window washers were rescued yesterday from outside a building in Midtown after their scaffolding broke on the 42nd floor, according to the New York Post.

The workers, one believed to be in his 60s, were stuck outside 1177 6th Avenue for about an hour, according to the paper. Firefighters had to cut power to the scaffolding before bringing the men in through a window. The FDNY said they were uninjured. METRO/DB

Occupy Wall Street link to murder may be error

- DNA recovered from padlock after subway stunt matches 2004 murder
- But law enforcement sources now saying DNA may be contaminated

A DNA link that may have connected the Occupy Wall Street movement to an unsolved 2004 murder may now be the result of a lab goof, according to reports.

On March 28, activists used chains to open the emergency gates at several subway stations, prompting free rides in protest of MTA fare hikes.

A sample collected by police from a chain used at the Beverley Road subway station in Flatbush reportedly matched DNA gathered from a CD player that was found near the dead body of 21-year-old Sarah Fox in 2004.

But last night, police sources told both the New York Post and the Daily News that the DNA may have been left by the same lab technician who handled both the CD player and the padlock.

"It was a total screw up," one anonymous cop told the Post.

"What are the chances that the killer came in contact with this chain and left his DNA on it all these years later?" said another skeptical cop.

Fox's nude body was found after she disappeared near Inwood Hill Park during a run.

When Metro asked, Occupy Wall Street denied that it had anything to do with organizing the March 28 subway protest.

"After it happened, a lot of media gave credit to OWS, but we don't actually know the people who organized it," Occupy Wall Street press team member Linnea Paton told Metro yesterday morning.

The activists who placed the chains at Beverly Road station were masked, according to police surveillance footage.

The NYPD released the surveillance video earlier this year, which shows the masked vandals propping open the subway gates with padlocks and chains.

When asked about tweets that Occupy Wall Street accounts made in March spreading the word about the subway protest, Paton responded, "A lot of people were excited to see that type of protest happen, but in terms of organizing it, we did not. It didn't come from one of our working groups."

Online post brags of stunt

On March 28, OccupyWallStreet.org posted a release online crediting OWS protesters and local union workers with the padlocking:

- "This morning before rush hour, teams of activists, many from Occupy Wall Street, in conjunction with rank-and-file workers from the Transport Workers Union Local 100 and the Amalgamated Transit Union, opened up more than 20 stations across the city for free entry," read the post.
- Transport Workers Union Local 100 spokesperson Jim Gannon said it's possible union members were involved in the protest, but would have been disciplined if they were caught.
- "If they were there, they did it on their own without any encouragement from the union," Gannon told Metro. "I haven't seen anything that shows any of our people were there."

No arrests in case yet

No arrests were made during the March 28 action.

No members of OWS were questioned by police yesterday, said OWS attorney Norman Siegel. When asked, police said they weren't questioning OWS members.

The lab worker who may have mistakenly tainted the DNA will be disciplined. METRO/CG

Who was Sarah Fox?

Fox, a Pennsauken, N.J. native, was studying acting at Julliard in 2004.

A search was launched when she didn't return home from a run. Six days later, her body was found in tulip petals in Inwood Hill Park. METRO/CG

Officials want to ban sex offenders from kids' libraries

COMSTOCK

▶ Sex offenders are banned from schools and playgrounds, but not the children's area of public libraries.

Convicted sex offenders aren't allowed on playgrounds, or near schools, but incredibly, they can stroll right into the children's section of city public libraries.

City officials are now trying to change that, proposing a law change yesterday that would ban sex offenders from children's library reading rooms.

Public Advocate Bill de Blasio and Queens Councilman Peter Vallone said the law is an attempt to prevent what they call an underreported crime against children.

On Monday, a registered sex offender was arrested for allegedly fondling two girls, ages 6 and 9, at the Flushing branch of the Queens Public Library. Joel Grubert, 49, had a history of criminal sex abuse against young girls, according to reports.

According to de Blasio spokesman Wiley Norvell, crimes like these are underreported because libraries are heavily used by immigrant families, who face a language barrier or fear deportation.

"It is common sense that we keep sexual predators away from areas where young kids congregate," said Vallone. "Children's rooms in libraries are really indoor playgrounds for growing minds, and our kids need every protection we can give them."

A law banning offenders from entire libraries passed the New York State Senate but did not pass the Assembly. This time around, Vallone and de Blasio singled out children's reading rooms to get the law enacted.

"The idea is the law would act as a deterrent to sex offenders," said Norvell. "It would become something their parole officer would explain to them as one of the places they cannot go."

Currently, offenders are banned from playgrounds and from living within 1,000 feet of a school or children's daycare. In other states, sex offenders have previously been banned from parks, beaches, pools and even malls.

Metro-North testing online ticket apps

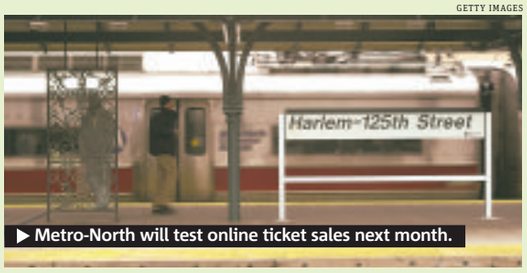
GETTY IMAGES



▶ Metro-North will test online ticket sales next month.

Some New York commuters may soon consider paper railroad passes and lines at ticket vending machines annoyances of the past, now that smartphones can be used to pay for train tickets.

Metro-North, the nation's second-largest commuter rail line, said yesterday that next month it is starting a mobile ticketing pilot program that allows passengers to buy and display tickets on their iPhone, Android or BlackBerry smartphones.

Participants in the trial — initially just railway employees — will be able to download a free app to their smartphone. With it, they can use their credit or debit card to buy a digital ticket.

Train conductors can then check the screen of the phone in the passenger's hand and validate the ticket, either visually or by using a hand scanner to read the ticket's barcode.

Metro-North, which is run by the MTA, said that if the pilot is successful it will expand it to include customers. It's too soon to tell if the app will be extended to the subway system.

Not on subways

The MTA said that it was too soon to say whether it would consider expanding the service to the New York subway, a much bigger transport network with millions of daily riders.

New York is following the lead of Boston, where the MBTA plans to offer online ticketing this fall. Cellphone ticketing has been widespread in Japan for years.

INHUMANE CHOICE TO GAS 750 CANADA GEESE TO DEATH

Opinion

DAVID KAROPKIN
FOUNDER, GOOSEWATCH NYC

letters@metro.us

The cruel decision to round up and exterminate 751 Canada geese at Jamaica Bay Wildlife Refuge on Monday morning was based on bad science, and counters the very definition of a "wildlife refuge."

Although the removal operations were funded by taxpayers, no prior public notice was given and transparency has been denied. Officials claim the roundup and gassing of these birds was conducted humanely, but our requests for documentation, even by the media or other third parties, have been dismissed.

The roundups are not humane in any way, and carbon dioxide asphyxiation of these birds is especially cruel. The goose meat donated to food banks under the guise of charity is unregulated and insufficiently inspected — in other words, it is potentially toxic.

The removals proceeded despite pleas from animal advocates, aviation experts, biologists, ecologists and public officials, who all agree that the removal of these birds will have no impact on the alleged risk posed to airplanes.

Actually, the removals could even prove counterproductive, as other birds can be expected to reoccupy the newly created vacant habitat.

DNA testing by The Smithsonian Institute determined that the geese that collided with Flight 1549, the "Miracle on the Hudson," were migrating from Labrador, Canada — and do not live in the area around the city's airports. Geese migrating through New York are distinct from the population of geese targeted by summer roundups. Even removing every animal in New York City would not have prevented the potentially horrific incident.

The National Park Service released this photo Tuesday of the 711 geese that were rounded up from the Jamaica Bay Wildlife Refuge on Monday, to the outrage of many New Yorkers. On their website, the NPS confirmed that about half of the 1,500 geese in the wildlife refuge have been killed this summer, 751 geese in all. "The cull was as humane as possible," wrote the NPS online. "Geese were herded into pen areas, crated and taken to a food processor in Duchess County. They were euthanized and their meat will be distributed to food pantries in New York State." Hundreds of geese have been killed in New York City in the past few summers; no further removals are planned for this year, a federal official told Metro. METRO/CB

Plans for sleek new Penn Station addition

AMTRAK

A promise to give commuters another entryway into drab, overcrowded Penn Station is inching closer to reality.

Amtrak distributed renderings yesterday showing the proposed overhaul of the James A. Farley Post Office.

The building, across the street from Penn Station, will be revamped to create another entrance into Penn, which hosts the subway, along with the Long Island Rail Road, Amtrak and New Jersey Transit.

The sleek station, planned to cost $267 million, will connect directly to Penn Station and is scheduled to open in 2016.

Renderings show skylights streaming into an airy main room and wavy ceiling beams overhead, as commuters check train times on a digital screen.

Officials promise the station will alleviate traffic at Penn, the country's busiest train station. About 500,000 commuters pass through Penn Station every day, according to the Port Authority.

Construction will include building access to tracks for Amtrak, NJ Transit and the Long Island Rail Road and more elevators, escalators and stairs to ferry New Yorkers to and from trains.

Transit advocates, as well as late U.S. Senator Daniel Moynihan, have long pushed for the unused post office to be transformed into a train station, arguing it will help relieve crowding at Penn.

Prettying up Penn Station

- Officials are also trying to find out how to revamp Penn Station, much maligned for its aesthetically unpleasing edifice. According to Crain's New York, the MTA commissioned a report on ways to improve commuter traffic and improve its appearance.

Give the MTA your two cents and win a free MetroCard

NEW YORK. The MTA announced yesterday they are looking for customers to complete online opinion surveys up to several times a year.

"The online opinion survey initiative allows us to better understand the needs of subway, bus and railroad riders," Aaron Donovan, a spokesman for the MTA, told Metro. "It allows us to make better informed decisions about our customers."

After every online survey, the MTA will randomly select several customers who finished the survey and offer them a free MetroCard or a free 10-trip ticket on the MTA railroad of their choice.

The surveys haven't been created yet, but the questions would most likely be about the environment of stations, safety messages and the convenience of using bridges and tunnels.

Romney's conservative message did not go down very well at the annual convention of the NAACP, a civil rights organization whose African-American members are among Obama's strongest supporters.

The reaction was not uniformly negative. Romney received a standing ovation at the end and there were numerous instances of applause throughout the speech. REUTERS

Obama backed by single people, Romney by married couples

President Barack Obama's slim lead over Republican rival Mitt Romney in the White House race is fueled by a broad marriage gap, with Obama enjoying a big advantage among single voters — particularly women, a Quinnipiac University poll found yesterday.

Obama leads among single voters by 54 percent to 34 percent, while married voters back Romney 51 percent to 38 percent, the poll found.

Obama has a huge advantage with single women, 60 percent to 31 percent, while Romney leads among married women 49 percent to 42 percent. Romney leads by 19 percentage points among married men, and Obama leads by 9 points among single men.

The poll showed Obama with an overall 3-point national edge on Romney, 46 percent to 43 percent, four months before the November 6 election.

"Although much has been made about the gender gap and how Obama's lead among women fuels his campaign, the marriage gap is actually larger and more telling," said Quinnipiac pollster Peter Brown.

"Married people are more likely to be older, more financially secure and more socially conservative than unmarried voters," he said. "Married voters are more likely to focus on the economy and health care, while single voters are more focused on issues such as gay rights and reproductive issues." REUTERS

Admission: Free
Event date: July 14, 2012 at 3:00 PM
Event Place: The Times center
Seminar Instructor: Christian Instructor Man Hee Lee of the Republic of Korea

Christian Instructor Man Hee Lee will be testifying to the fulfillment of the New Testament prophecies—specifically Matthew 13 and 24, and the entire book of Revelation—according to what has been seen, heard, and commanded based on the 5W's and 1H (who, what, where, when, why, how). The gospel of heaven, Jesus' prophecies of the New Testament, was preached in Europe to the West, and was testified to all the people of the world according to the prophecy of Matthew 24:14: "and this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in the whole world as a testimony to all nations, and then the end will come."

This testimony is given to those who believe in the prophecies of the Bible and have been waiting their fulfillment. Having started in the Republic of Korea, the fulfillment will now go out to the ends of the earth.

Every month in Korea, more than 3,000 people gather to listen to the Revealed Word from Instructor Lee, and that number is growing rapidly. Pastors from 28 different countries who heard this news invited the instructor to come to Europe. Because of the high demand, Instructor Lee is returning to Europe on July 4 for the second time in the past 2 months. The fulfillment of the New Testament is the fulfillment of God's purpose and the hope of all humanity. The world of faith in America must open up its eyes to his testimony as he is invited to come to America. America cannot wait any longer.

A true believer who believes in God, Jesus, and the promise of the Bible must hear these words, and everyone who attends will not regret it. God's will, the purpose of the New Testament, is completed through this.

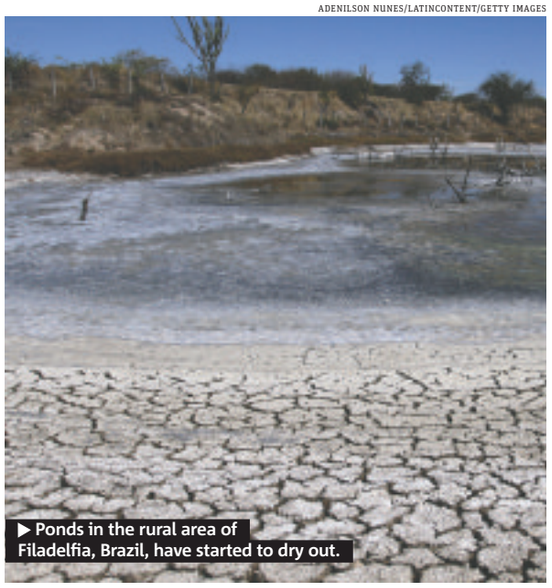
Warm 2011 shows climate change despite La Nina

ADENILSON NUNES/LATINCONTENT/GETTY IMAGES



▶ Ponds in the rural area of Filadelfia, Brazil, have started to dry out.

Last year was among the 15 warmest since recordkeeping began in the late 19th century, despite a La Nina weather pattern that should have cooled global temperatures, according to an annual climate assessment.

La Nina's failure to cause significantly cooler global temperatures is one of many indications of long-term climate warming, according to the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's State of the Climate report compiled by 378 scientists from 48 nations. La Nina was responsible for droughts in eastern Africa and North America, the scientists reported.

Last year "will be remembered as a year of extreme events, both in the United States and around the world," Deputy NOAA Administrator Kathryn D. Sullivan said in a statement. "Every weather event that happens now takes place in the context of a changing global environment."

Texas had the hottest summer since data collection began in 1895 and extreme heat may be more common in the future.

"Conditions leading to droughts such as the one that occurred in Texas in 2011 are, at least in the case of temperature, distinctly more probable than they were 40-50 years ago," according to the study. It used as a proxy 2008, another La Nina year, in which it found extreme heat was about 20 times more likely than in the 1960s.

Carbon dioxide emissions increased in 2011 and the yearly global average surpassed 390 parts per million for the first time since records started. BLOOMBERG

Talking points

Tom Cruise's exes are teaming up

Katie Holmes reportedly had some high-profile sounding boards as she planned her exit from her marriage to Tom Cruise — including Cruise's second ex-wife, Nicole Kidman, according to Us Weekly. "They've spoken over the last few weeks," a source says. "Nicole has been supportive, saying she's been through it too and to hang in there. Nicole offered her support and help." The two first became acquainted when Holmes married Cruise in 2006. "She has been a private friend not many people know about," the source explains. So how did Holmes reach out to Kidman on the sly? The L.A. Times reports that Holmes used a disposable cell phone provided by a friend to plot her divorce filing without Cruise's camp catching on.

Adele in baby mode

Adele announced she was pregnant late last month, with new rumors following that she's also engaged to the baby's father, Simon Konecki. Well, now sources tell Heatworld.com that the British singer is actually much farther along in her pregnancy than previously thought — and is due in September. "Adele has barely left the house in recent months, so she could keep this to herself for as long as possible," the source says. "She stopped exercising a few months ago, and since then it's been all about the baby." The source adds that the advanced pregnancy is the reason Adele opted to not fly to the U.S. in May for the Billboard Music Awards, despite winning a dozen trophies that night.

Magic is gone for 'Potter' co-stars

After more than a year of being engaged, the wedding's apparently off for "Harry Potter" co-stars Jamie Campbell Bower and Bonnie Wright, according to Us Weekly. "Bonnie and Jamie split a while ago," a source says of the pair. "It was amicable, but things had not been going right for some time. It's sad." The pair first acknowledged their romance in February 2010, and he popped the question in April 2011. Bower seems to be moving on, though, as on Monday he was spotted in Toronto holding hands with his "The Mortal Instruments" co-star, Lily Collins.

1 Heidi Klum and Tim Gunn showed a little leg while promoting Season 10 of "Project Runway" with a little help from the Rockettes.

2 James Murphy of the late LCD Soundsystem was looking a little worse for the wear at the "Shut Up & Play The Hits" screening in New York on Tuesday. Here's a thought, James: Maybe you should go in the studio and write some songs that make us feel alive again — and/or iron.

3 Aw, Freida Pinto — we're happy to see you, too! The actress was on the red carpet for the premiere of her new film, "Trishna," on Tuesday night.

4 Former "House" cutie Jesse Spencer surfaced at ESPN's Body Issue party with his girlfriend, pro surfer Maya Gabeira.

5 We don't say this often, but Kendra Wilkinson looked adorable in New York on Tuesday afternoon.

Here comes Comic-Con

Our Hollywood correspondent offers an overview of what we can expect at the convention — one of the best places to learn about upcoming blockbusters

Between the megasuccess of this spring's "The Avengers" — with a worldwide take of more than $1 billion — and the anticipated arrival of "The Dark Knight Rises" later this month, it's quite the year for comic book movies, making this week's San Diego Comic-Con that much more exciting. Here's some of the stuff we're looking forward to most at the annual nerd-fest. Be sure to follow along on Twitter (@nedrick) for behind-the-scenes updates from the Con all weekend long.

NED EHRBAR
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

Television

▶ "The Walking Dead": The popularity of the zombie drama's first appearance at Comic-Con two years ago caught organizers off-guard, but by now they should be ready for the massive fan outpouring. And with the show's third season debuting in October, we're hoping to learn some juicy details.

▶ "Community": The cast of the quirky comedy with a passionate — if small — fan base returns to Comic-Con on the heels of series creator Dan Harmon's newsmaking termination this spring. We're curious to hear what direction the show will take with new bosses — and a reduced episode order — next season.

▶ "The Walking Dead" is invading Comic-Con.

▶ "Elementary": The BBC's modernized "Sherlock," starring Benedict Cumberbatch, has been a major success — so an American take was almost inevitable. This one finds a still-British Holmes (played by Jonny Lee Miller, who co-starred with Cumberbatch onstage in "Frankenstein" last year) fresh out of rehab and in New York, accompanied by a female Watson (Lucy Liu).

▶ "Revolution": A new mind-bending sci-fi series from "Lost" guru J.J. Abrams about the state of the world 15 years after all technology mysteriously stopped working? And the pilot episode was directed by "Iron Man" helmer Jon Favreau? Sign us up.

Movies

▶ "Iron Man" has made regular appearances at Comic-Con in recent years.

▶ "The Hobbit": Peter Jackson completed principal photography on his two-film adaptation of the J.R.R. Tolkien classic just last week, so hopefully he'll have something exciting — or at least something to get the taste of his disappointing display at CinemaCon out of viewers' mouths.

▶ "Iron Man 3": While filming hasn't started yet on the franchise juggernaut and "Avengers" follow-up, fans will be eager for whatever surprises Marvel superproducer Kevin Feige decides to unveil.

▶ "Elysium": Visionary filmmaker Neill Blomkamp is bringing in some big guns for his follow-up to 2009's "District 9," including stars Matt Damon and Jodie Foster — not exactly a familiar Comic-Con face. We're excited to hear about the class warfare sci-fi film, set for release next March.

▶ "Django Unchained": While not necessarily the usual Comic-Con fare, we're stoked to get a glimpse at Quentin Tarantino's next flick, a revenge-fueled western starring Jamie Foxx as a freed slave. Tarantino will be on hand along with Foxx, Christoph Waltz and Kerry Washington to tease the Christmas release.

TV watch list

'The Real L Word'

REALITY. Why limit all of the love and bickering to L.A.? Season 3 expands the cast to include lesbians from New York City. Season premiere, 10 p.m., Showtime

'Suits'

DRAMA. Harvey is in danger of losing in the courtroom for the very first time when longtime legal foe Travis Tanner (guest star Eric Close) shows up with damaging information about one of Harvey's old cases. 10 p.m., USA AMBER RAY

Off the wall in Greenpoint

The free House of Vans concert series is in its second year An eclectic lineup complements the brand's 'nostalgia versus modern' aesthetic

The lineup for this summer's House of Vans parties in Greenpoint reads like a carefully curated selection of bands from the Vans Warped Tour — plus a few stellar acts that would never quite fit on that annual punk-focused festival. Pulling together an eclectic bill was the point, with renowned promoters FYF enlisted to create the calendar.

"We definitely wanted to reach out to the punk and hard-core fans that Vans has associated themselves with, but also … broaden it from the indie rock to the electronic," says David Peterson of FYF, who serves as manager of the House of Vans. Acts as varied as punk veterans 7 Seconds (tonight) to garage/soul band King Khan and the Shrines (July 26) to Sub Pop electronic artist Washed Out (Aug. 2) will perform at the space this season.

April Vitkus, Vans' director of lifestyle marketing, sees the wide-ranging concerts as a natural extension of the company, which has been catering to the skateboard/surf lifestyle since 1966.

"FYF really understood how to mix up the old and the new, and that's something that is so true to our brand," Vitkus says. "We have new consumers who love this brand and what it stands for today, and then we have people like me who have been wearing Vans for 20 years and still wear Vans. FYF started coming up with these awesome lineups. … So the crowd [at the House of Vans parties] is a mix of young and old. And nostalgia versus modern is what Vans is all about."

TOD SEELIE

▶ "New Yorkers are used to having all these free summer events, like movies in Bryant Park and the River to River Festival," says David Peterson, manager of the House of Vans. "We fit in nicely with that."

When are you exclusive?

There are a few ways to figure out when you've gotten yourself into boyfriend/girlfriend territory

Segel

Williams

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

From recent reports it seems that actors Michelle Williams and Jason Segel have quietly crossed that line between playing with the idea of being exclusive and committing to being a couple. At a premiere party to celebrate Segel's film "The Five-Year Engagement," they were seen holding hands and gazing into each other's eyes. They are both known for taking their time when it comes to romance. It raises the question: How does a hopeful pair get from one point to the next? When do you actually become an exclusive couple?

Shrink Wrap

DR. JANE GREER
HEALTH.METRO.US

One of my patients was pondering this recently, and she asked me when it is appropriate to have the conversation and negotiate the terms of becoming a committed couple. I told her that in order to gauge that, you want to look at what is going on between the two of you.

Being exclusive is the exciting hill everyone wants to get over in a new, promising relationship. And there will be definite signs that you are successfully making that climb. There is the obvious: If you begin to refer to each other, and to introduce each other, as boyfriend and girlfriend. Other clues are when you start to show your affection in public by holding hands and touching, making the statement that you belong together, or the biggie: You start saying "I love you." And the best indication of all is that you no longer want to date other people or even leave that door open for the possibility. When it becomes clear that you are focusing your energy and heart on that one person, and that it is a mutual choice, that is a good time to check in to determine if you are now being exclusive.

Once you decide you are each other's one and only, you will be able to usher in the emotional and sexual trust and safety that most people crave. You want "the talk" my patient was referring to — and even more importantly, you want the move toward steady dating. You want to acknowledge what is already happening between the two of you rather than be in a negotiation to put something in place the way it seems to be for Michelle and Jason.

Government should help those trying to help themselves

RE: "YOU'LL MISS MINIMUM WAGE WHEN ROBOTS ARRIVE": This is to Daniel Green: With all of your wisdom, I hope you also realize that there is a generation of 20-somethings drowning in tens of thousands of dollars of crippling student loan debt and that higher education isn't always an option. Maybe instead of criticizing those that do work those 2-3 part-time jobs, you should be thankful you don't have to worry about minimum wage pay to begin with — at least that's what it sounds like from the pedestal you're preaching off of. We live in a society where these jobs are a gift to the underpaid and underemployed — or someone like myself, trying to pay for college. The 10-cent raise every year probably isn't gonna break the big business piggy bank.

KRISTI SENAT VIA E-MAIL

Don't do the climb if you can't treat the Lyme

This is just friendly feedback: Lyme disease is caused by a bacteria, not a virus, and it's called Borrelia burgdorferi. It's from the same family of bacteria as syphilis. Bacteria are treated with antibiotics, not viruses. Antibiotics do not work on bacteria.

ABDEL BRAHIMI, MD, VIA E-MAIL

Blame game played in the past — and future, too!

RE: "CLINTON AND DEMS SOW SEEDS OF FAILURE": Sorry, but nearly everything Raymond Collins mentions is either incorrect or simply irrelevant to the original point. Yes, banking deregulation began under Clinton — but it was under Bush's watch (and his encouragement) that Wall Street created and pursued the labyrinthine schemes that resulted in the 2008 meltdown. The subprime mortgage market (another Bush creation) was utterly tangential to the crisis. Further, I remind everyone of Senator Mitch McConnell's on-record statement of the Republican's single priority: making Obama a one-term president. Only a fool could expect assistance from a party of such ideologues, especially as they now oppose policies that they previously advocated.

JOSEPH CONNELL, BROOKLYN

The persistence of sheets in sheep's clothing

The KKK is not a civic-minded group. It is a gang whose sole purpose is to hurt people — not help people. The State of Georgia was absolutely in the right not to allow them to post a sign. It has nothing to do with freedom of speech or any of their rights as individuals. The state does not support street gangs anymore than a gang in sheep's clothing, which is what this KKK group is. The most shocking part about this is — they still exist?

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're smart, you won't gamble with friends, even for small stakes. A big misunderstanding could arise over something rather petty.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Devote your time and attention to situations that could make or save you money. Time and attention will yield large profits down the line.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Provided you don't tip your hand prematurely, a significant objective can be achieved. Remember the competitors lurking in the wings who would love to know your plans.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Give no credence to advice offered you by someone whom you know doesn't have a tight handle on what you're doing. This person's intentions may be good, but his or her counsel isn't.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. When it comes to a partnership arrangement, let your cohort do all the talking. There is a strong chance your two cents' worth could be the wrong thing at the wrong time.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. You might find it necessary to make a small concession in a commercial matter in order to reap some larger gains. You'll understand that nothing is ever optimal.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Don't settle for sticker price when you're out shopping for something that is more money than you want to pay. With a little poking around, you'll find a good substitute at a lower price.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. One of your greatest obstacles is allowing self-defeating thoughts to overwhelm your thinking. You can control anything you set your mind to, including avoiding all the negatives.

Have a wet, hot, NYC summer

▶ Arts and crafts: The Textile Arts Center offers classes in weaving, screen printing and more.

Metro rounds up the best summer camp-style activities in the city
This time, you won't get in trouble for spiking your bug juice

Just because you're an adult doesn't mean that you can't get in on the fun of summer camp-style activities. We've found the best ways to replicate the experience in the city, from arts and crafts to team sports — no bunk beds or sewing name tags in your underwear required!

Flag football

Sign up for one of the seven-week sessions organized by the NYC Social Sports Club (www.nycsocialsportsclub.com) for your chance at no-contact — they promise! — gridiron glory. Plus, unlike when you were a kid, postgame drinks are encouraged.

Archery

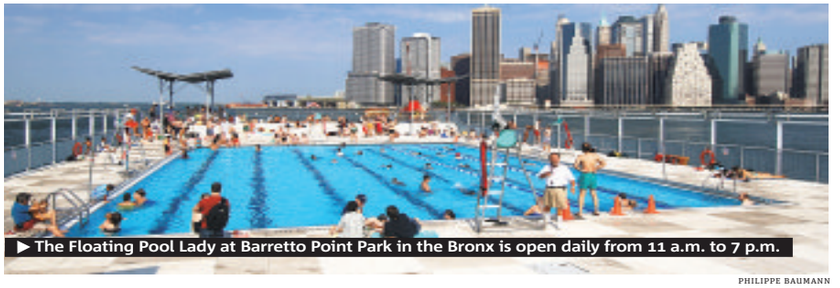
Out in Ozone Park, Pro Line Archery (www.archeryny.com, 718-845-9280) has leagues for serious shooters, but novices can get a taste of the Hunger Games by giving the bow and arrow a whirl for just $13, plus $7 for equipment rental.



▶ The Floating Pool Lady at Barretto Point Park in the Bronx is open daily from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Kayaking

The Downtown Boathouse (www.downtownboathouse.org) offers New Yorkers the opportunity to try kayaking in the Hudson River for free at one of three designated areas in the city. All they ask is that you know how to swim and that you strap on a life vest. If there are people waiting, you'll have to return the kayak after 20 minutes — but if you're not an experienced rower, that's probably enough of a workout.

Jewelry making

Just off of Union Square, Beads of Paradise (www.beadsofparadisenyc.com, 212-620-0642) offers a two-hour Sunday afternoon course in "findings," those little metal bits that pull together a piece of jewelry. For $75, you'll have the chance to make your own necklace, bracelet or earrings. You get to take home your creation, plus a set of tools and a bead organizer box.

Biking

Fifteen dollars buys two hours on a powder-blue, three-speed rental bike on Governors Island (www.govisland.com). We suggest making a couple of loops around the perimeter, then taking a break at Little Eva's on the Southwest tip of the island for grilled corn and fresh oysters — with a view of Lady Liberty.

Horseback riding

While there are plenty of places to ride horses in the five boroughs, Kensington Stables (www.kensingtonstables.com, 718-972-4588), housed in a barn built in 1930, offers a new way to enjoy Prospect Park, with trail rides for just $37 an hour.

Swimming

▶ The reopening of the McCarren Park pool in Williamsburg adds one more option for public swimming. Still, the best has to be the Floating Pool Lady (nycgovparks.org/facility/pools/floating-pool), designed by architect Jonathan Kirschenfeld and suspended in a barge in Barretto Point Park.

Beware! Tomorrow is Friday the 13th. If you want to get into the spirit and spook yourself silly, log on to www.metro.us/songza and www.songza.com/listen/horror-movie-scores-songza. It's a three-hour playlist of the most hair-raising, spine-tingling and blood-curdling scores from the most iconic horror movies ever made. There's the sci-fi ooze of Bernard Herrmann's score to "The Day the Earth Stood Still," the classical eeriness of Howard Shore's score from "The Silence of the Lambs" and we're pretty sure you'll get to hear Steve Jablonsky's opening theme to "Friday the 13th," which may even placate the esteemed Mr. Jason Voorhees. If that doesn't work, he may have to go back to killing campers. Mwahahaha!

David Malbequi serves catch of the day, all day

If you go

Prima
58 E. First St.
646-559-4823

Hot Chef

Prima, a one-room wonder in the East Village, starts serving coffee and pastries at 8 a.m. and stays open all day, to an indeterminate evening closing time. You'll want to hang around.

The pastries come from Francois Payard, and the coffee is from Ninth Street Espresso. At around noon, you can order a beer and a fried hake sandwich. "And then at 5 or 6," says head chef David Malbequi, "you can start again with a cocktail and an oyster."

The centerpiece of Prima's menu is its seafood, which Malbequi hand-picks daily. "We get fresh seafood every day," he says. "Sometimes I 86 menu items if I don't get the quality I want. … Fish has to be fresh. It's nothing you can play around with."

On a recent visit, he brought out a dish of periwinkles along with a couple of pins stuck in a champagne cork. The pins are used to scoop out the meat, which he serves with whole-grain bread and a rich homemade aioli.

Prima's oyster rotation includes Montauk Pearls (Malbequi's favorite), briny St. Simon and sweet, creamy Beau Soleil. They come with a bright, tangy mignonette sauce, but the oysters are so fresh and clean-tasting that you'll want to eat them bare.

PRIMA

▶ Chef David Malbequi reels us in with his fresh oysters.

"If you have a top product — if it's perfect," Malbequi says, "you have nothing to add."

Is it unusual to have a dining space that stays open all day?
The idea is to be open all day long — you can have it anytime: breakfast, lunch, dinner. What we want to do here is be like room service: You choose your food from the counter, and we assemble it in the kitchen, everything on one tray at the register. You eat, leave your tray and then go. … It's easier to not have dining service — especially at lunch; you want to go fast.

Does Prima's all-day menu mirror how you like to eat?
Personally, I don't eat fish. It's not that I don't like it — I don't appreciate it. At the end, I'm empty. I have to eat something else. Something more heavy, like meat. I love to cook it, though! I compare fish to women and meat to men.

Can you explain that a little bit?
Fish is very delicate, and with meat, you have to cook it, and then it rests — like a man, always resting. Fish, it's like a girl; you have to be gentle, otherwise you're going to break it. But meat is more tough.

What I also like about fish is you cook it, it's on the plate. You go right from the pan to the plate. You cannot play with it. Meat, you can always adjust it. If it's not cooked enough, you can put it in the oven. With fish, it's like 1, 2, 3 — that's it.

I'm a huge fan of sardines — it's a very sustainable fish. What was your inspiration for the sardines rilletes on the menu?
The sardine, that is a classic thing. You know, when you are in France and you don't know what to eat, you take a can, you open it, you crush it and you add stuff inside.

I used to go to Morocco when I was younger, to Essaouira — it's a capital for the sardine. And when they are coming back, from the little boat, you know, they take the sardines, fillet them and put them on a piece of grilled bread, butter, lemon juice and mint. Just like that — raw.

Discovering Puglian wine: A sleeper region wakes up

The Puglia region has long been known as the "wine cellar of Italy," but word of these world-class vintages has only just started to trickle into America's wine bars.

Puglia (pronounced "pool-ya") is the heel of Italy's "boot," and is known for its diversity of terroir, which creates big, rich-flavored wines, similar to those produced in California.

"We need to make people understand the potential of Puglia," says Niccolo Maltini, Brand Ambassador for the Tormaresca estate, which was founded in Puglia in 1998 by the Antinori company, one of the oldest winemaking families in Italy.

"The wines that come out of Puglia are very different," Maltini says. "It's a much warmer climate, so the grapes get much riper than they do in the other areas, which makes the wine juicer."

And Puglian wines, Maltini adds, are generally less expensive than other Italian wines of the same quality. At least for now.

Next Thursday, La Scuola di Eataly's monthly "Aperitivo with the Winemaker" class will focus on the wines of Puglia, featuring six varieties from the region. Mr. Maltinti will lead the class, which offers tastings of six Tormaresca estate wines paired with small dishes prepared by Eataly's chefs.

After class, head up to Eataly's rooftop beer garden, the Birreria, for a sunset grappa and dolci.

LIVE FROM NEW YORK ... IT'S SUNDAY NIGHT

SANCTUARY HOTEL

▶ Save your Sunday afternoon theater ticket stub for a free drink at Haven at the Sanctuary Hotel.

ASELLINA'S

Fancy a night on the town — on a Sunday? Whether you're starting the weekend late or pulling a three-nighter, we've found your Sunday dancing, dining and deals

"With people working harder than ever and trying to get every moment out of the weekend, there is no reason for them not to enjoy themselves on Sunday, too," says Adam DelGiudice, beverage director at the newly opened Noir. On Sunday evenings, Noir's entrees are accompanied by a complimentary cocktail specifically paired for the dish by DelGuidice and Michelin-starred chef Jean-Yves Schillinger. "Folks look to end the weekend on a high note and start the week off on the right foot," DelGuidice adds.

Do a Broadway show on a Sunday and hop to the newly opened Haven at the Sanctuary Hotel afterward for a bite. Show your theater ticket stub for a complimentary cocktail with the purchase of one of Chef Madison Belem's signature entrees: How about spicy Cajun chicken or a summery Nicoise salad?

Dance, drink and watch a band at Thom Bar's Cuba Sundays (9 p.m. to 1 a.m., cover). The bar features authentic Cuban Mojito specials ($10 a pop) and music from Cuban band Grupo Irek, as well as DJ Wanda mixing up salsa, cha-cha, mambo, merengue, rumba and more.

Lounge poolside and dig some new sounds at the Gansevoort Park Avenue Hotel's Summer Series (3:30 to 8:30 p.m., no cover). This weekly artist showcase features sets by producer/DJ hotshots such as Morten Breum and Hard Rock Sofa every Sunday. It's a rare opportunity for non-hotel guests to access the entire tri-level rooftop complex (table reservations are required for pool access), which looks onto the Empire State Building. Other views include top-shelf celebs, poolside and barside.

Wind down with Asellina's new Mediterranean-inspired Sunday Supper. Chef Marco Porceddu's three-course prix-fixe menu (6 to 10 p.m., $35) includes ricotta salad with white balsamic vinegar, sauteed shrimp with cannellini beans and leeks, lamb meatballs with wild mushrooms, seafood stew with garlic ciabatta and tangy citrus panna cotta. Asellina's regular menu is available, too, and the restaurant's "Wine Down Sundays" means half-priced bottles of wine.

"Growing up in Italy, Sunday evenings were about family and friends getting together to share home-cooked meals and bottles of wine," says Chef Marco Porceddu. "Our Sunday Supper offers a fun, relaxing way to cap off your busy New York weekend."

Finding his stride

French legend Thierry Henry didn't know much about MLS before move
But the Red Bulls forward learned fast Now he is a star in the US

MIKE STOBE/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Henry's attention to detail, long hours of watching video and memory have been tremendous assets to Red Bull New York in his two seasons.

High-profile international players coming to MLS have a certain stereotype associated with them. The thought is they're advanced in their careers and looking for one final pay day before hanging up the cleats.

Such has not been the case with Red Bulls forward Thierry Henry who, despite battling injuries, is tied for fourth in MLS with nine goals this season.

"I've been involved 33, 34 years with high profile players before but that guy knows everything — the other players, the other teams — everything. He cares," Red Bulls head coach Hans Backe said. "It is very unusual to have a player at that level that has won everything and still cares and knows everything [and] is hungry to win. It is not common."

Henry came to MLS with a pedigree unlike any ever seen in the league. He won a World Cup in 1998 and was France's Player of the Year five times. When he came to MLS in summer 2010, he eschewed offers from top European clubs to come to New York, a city he had long been fascinated with.

It would've been easy for the 34-year-old striker to rest on his laurels and still likely succeed in MLS, but ask any of his teammates and they will be happy to talk about his work ethic.

"It was more difficult for me in the very beginning when I didn't know the teams. Now let's be honest, I have been here for two years; you don't have to tell me how some teams play and how good the players are and what they do," Henry said. "By now, you should know how most of the teams should play."

Lin angry?

The Daily News reported yesterday that Knicks point guard Jeremy Lin was angry the team didn't offer him a new contract before Houston, which signed him to an offer sheet last week.

Lin, however, took to his offical Twitter account in the afternoon to say any story without him being quoted was "probably not true."

The Knicks are expected to match the Rockets' offer.

Nets' D-Will, Wallace deals official

On the first day NBA teams could make free agent signings official, both of the Nets' big deals were signed exactly as planned.

Point guard Deron Williams signed a max deal — on his iPad — worth five years and $98.8 million, ending any speculation his choice might waver from last week's announcement.

Brooklyn also signed Gerald Wallace to a four-year, $40-million contract. However, the team has yet to finalize the Joe Johnson trade. METRO

Nets also add Stackhouse

While the Wallace and Williams deals were known for awhile, the Nets also added 17-year veteran Jerry Stackhouse.

Stackhouse, who will be playing for his eighth team, signed for one year and $1.3 million.

The North Carolina product scored 3.6 points per game for Atlanta last season in 30 games. He averaged just over nine minutes per game. METRO

Heat sign Allen, Lewis

Miami's addition of Ray Allen came as no surprise, but they also added recently released Rashard Lewis yesterday as well.

Lewis and his expiring contract were traded to the Hornets in June, before the veteran was cut.

Miami will only be on the hook for $2.6 million total — two years at the veteran's minimum. He averaged 7.8 points per game last season. METRO

Sources: Nets cut off talks for Howard

NBAE/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Howard

In the neverending saga of Dwight Howard to the Nets, yesterday's news came in the form of Brooklyn reportedly pulling out of trade talks.

ESPN and Yahoo! Sports both reported the Nets have pulled out of their pursuit for the All-Star center permanently and have signed Brook Lopez to a four-year, $61-million contract. Lopez, a restricted free agent, would have been the key component to any trade between the Magic and Nets.

Talks between the two sides have been off and on for at least six months, with the NBA trade deadline coming and going without a resolution. Howard decided to opt in to the final year of his contract, ending any chance the center would sign with Brooklyn in the offseason.

But after a tumultuous end to the season, including the firing of head coach Stan Van Gundy, Howard demanded a trade again, with Brooklyn being the desired location.

The Nets put a deal with Lopez, MarShon Brooks, Johan Petro and three first-round picks on the table, but after two weeks the Magic were still unsatisfied and the Nets decided to end talks yesterday once and for all.

The Magic are still reportedly entertaining trade offers from the Rockets and Lakers, who would likely include young center Andrew Bynum in any deal. MARK OSBORNE

Metro's Midseason MLB Power Rankings | by Mark Osborne

GETTY IMAGES

1 YANKEES (52-33)
I know it's boring, but there can be no question at this point that the Bronx Bombers are the best team in baseball. The one team that is even in the hunt is Texas, but the Yankees are an impressive ten games over .500 on the road while the Rangers are just five over. If the Rangers hadn't finished 2-5 heading into the All-Star break, they might be in this spot. When Andy Pettitte and Brett Gardner come back, it will be an added bonus.

2 RANGERS (52-34)
Texas has the best offense in the majors and a pretty solid rotation. How well that rotation holds up depends on how much you believe in Japanese rookie Yu Darvish — throwing on only four days rest in the United States — and Roy Oswalt — nearing 35 years old.

3 ANGELS (48-38)
We stay out West for a team that is already good and getting better. After the slow start for Albert Pujols it is amazing that they have the third-most wins in the American League. As weird as it still seems to say it, rookie Mike Trout may be the MVP this year as well.

4 TIGERS (44-42)
I make exceptions for records when they have the reigning Cy Young and MVP on the team (Justin Verlander) and the best 3-4 in baseball — Miguel Cabrera and Prince Fielder.

5 DODGERS (47-40)
For now they are treading water until Matt Kemp returns, which should be fairly soon. He'll be a huge spark to the lineup with Clayton Kershaw and Chris Capuano pitching well.

6 WHITE SOX (47-38)
Jake Peavy will improve and Chris Sale will regress (too many innings), but Adam Dunn is the key part of the team. If he keeps up this year's pace they'll be in the playoffs.

7 REDS (47-38)
Cincinnati is the class of the NL Central, regardless of what Pittsburgh's record is right now. They play the Brewers, Astros, Rockies and Padres four of their next five series.

8 NATIONALS (49-34)
Washington is a great story, but they are still a year away from being title contenders. Also, when you yank your best pitcher, Stephen Strasburg, out of the rotation in August you might miss the playoffs.

9 RAYS (45-41)
Tampa Bay gets caught in the numbers game as usual. They will struggle against the Yanks in the second half after blitzing them in the first. Their lineup is still awful too.

10 GIANTS (46-40)
If only they could get something, anything, from Tim Lincecum they might be ranked higher. Melky Cabrera, despite his All-Star MVP, will decline some as well.

11 METS (46-40)
That other New York team has had a Cinderella season, but it won't result in a playoff spot. The offense isn't there and the pitching is lacking with a brutal bullpen.

12 BRAVES (46-39)
New York and Atlanta are stuck in a similar position in the same division. Neither are playoff teams, but neither are terrible either. Though the Mets have more youth to build on.

13 CARDINALS (46-40)
St. Louis has the lineup to compete even without Pujols anymore, but it's Dave Duncan they miss more. The pitching has been mediocre at best and Lance Lynn won't keep up his Cy Young pace.

14 INDIANS (44-41)
People in Cleveland will be mad at me for putting the Indians so much lower than the Tigers and White Sox, but too bad. Your best offensive player is Jason Kipnis.

15 PIRATES (48-37)
Andrew McCutchen is for real. And that is just about it. The Pirates have a hitter for the future, they just need Gerrit Cole to get there and have the pitcher to match.

16 ORIOLES (45-40)
As you can tell by the last two teams, this is the Rodney Dangerfield portion of the rankings. Talk to me when your ace isn't Jason Hammel, with his 3.47 ERA.

17 RED SOX (43-43)
Oh, former Yankee rival, how we miss you. To be in the playoff hunt they need both Jon Lester and Josh Beckett to turn it around. It just doesn't seem likely at this point.

18 BLUE JAYS (43-43)
Toronto is really wasting the talent of Jose Bautista to criminal levels by now. It's not their fault Kyle Drabek is hurt and Ricky Romero has been tremendously disappointing, but it is still too bad.

19 MARLINS (41-44)
If any team at the bottom of these rankings has a chance to make a playoff run, it is Miami. They just need Josh Johnson, Jose Reyes and Heath Bell to turn it around. Very fast.

20 ATHLETICS (43-43)
You have to give Billy Beane and the A's credit — again. That being said, no way Josh Reddick keeps up his pace. Also, who's Tommy Milone?

21 PHILLIES (37-50)
Is that record for real? Even if they don't trade a pitcher, no way Chase Utley and Ryan Howard bring them back from this far down.

22 BREWERS (40-45)
If Milwaukee trades Zack Grienke then their season is really over. But hey, how about that Ryan Braun not being a steroid creation?
